PHOENIX BOY NOW TEACHER

The friends of Fred Spaulding, a Phoenix boy who graduated from the high school of this city, will be glad to learn that he has been given a position of science teacher in Rugby, the great English public school, whose only competitors are Eton and Harrow. He had finished his course as a Rhodes scholar at Oxford.

The day before he left Oxford he received a letter from the headmaster of Rugby asking him if he would accept a position at that college. He replied by telephone that he was about to sail for America. He was asked to come to Rugby where he passed the rigid examination and was enlisted for his duties, which he will begin there September 25.

Rugby was founded in the latter part of the sixteenth century but did not attain great prominence for nearly one hundred years. It took its present rank under the administration of the great headmaster, Thomas Arnold, between 1829 and 1842. Like the other great public schools it is patronized chiefly by nobility and the upper middle class. It has at present an attendance of about 600. It devotes more attention to classics than either of the other public schools, though of late modern tendencies have made inroads upon the curriculum.

Mr. Spaulding recently landed in New York whence he wrote to his father, E. A. Spaulding, formerly of Phoenix, now of Harper, Cal., informing him of his appointment. He will shortly visit the coast during which trip he will spend a short time in Phoenix. Mr. Spaulding was here about a year ago and lectured at the high school auditorium. He had just finished several months of relief work in Belgium. This year he was one of 16 Rhodes scholars who spent three months in France driving ambulances for the American hospital in Paris. He was one of four selected for work at the front and naturally had many exciting experiences gathering the wounded from the battlefields. He was frequently under fire.

During that service he collected much data and took many interesting views which will be used in a series of lectures by him in the east. He will probably deliver a lecture in the course of his brief trip to the coast.

PLEADS GUILTY AND TROUBLE IS STARTED

Being Hit on Head Humiliates, Shames, Injures and Otherwise Annoys Plaintiff, Says Charge

When S. J. Tribolet pleaded guilty to the charge of assault in the justice court yesterday and was fined $25, his troubles only began. As far as the plaintiff was concerned, the matter ended, but P. T. Hurley, the complaining witness, filed suit in the superior court charging that the blow dealt him by Tribolet caused him to be publicly humiliated and shamed to his great detriment, both in his business and social standing in the community. To help heal his mental injury, anguish, humiliation and shame he asks $10,000 damages.

Two days ago Hurley filed suit against Tribolet for $25,000 damages for alleged breach of contract. In the complaint reference was made to the assault on the plaintiff when he called at the defendant's market to tender the balance due Tribolet when he refused payment and struck him. In the new complaint Hurley states that he was hit on the head, cut, bruised and wounded. He was approached without provocation or warning, he alleges, and was incapable of defending himself. He was wearing eye glasses at the time he was struck and the glasses were shattered. For the mental injury he asks $5,000 damages.

"The defendant is a man of great and considerable wealth," the complaint sets forth, "and the facts alleged present a proper case for assessing and awarding to the plaintiff, punitive or exemplary damages in the sum of $5,000."

GOOD PROGRAM COLUMBIA TODAY

It's been a long time since we have heard that almost forgotten announcement, "Ladies and Gentlemen: We have with us tonight in the right hand corner, Mr. Al Kauffman, one-time aspirant for the heavyweight title of the world, and in the left hand corner, Mr. Wm. Russell, the best athlete in pictures. These gentlemen will box three rounds for points." Such is the announcement that interludes the five-reel picture, "The Bruiser," which is shown today and tomorrow at the Columbia. It tells an unusual story of a handsome, big, virile fellow who is a great power with his fellow workmen and whom the millionaire wants out of the way. It is a picture that deals with the labor question and is absolutely new. Wm. Russell plays the part of the big fellow whom the millionaire, through a society woman, flatters until they get him to enter society, making him believe that the woman loves him. They make a fool of him in his unnatural element but he awakens in time to regain his lost ground and to return to his labor friends, who think he has deserted their just cause. He returns and not only wins the battle for better wages and conditions, but he marries the little girl who has been true to him all through the trials when she thought him lost to her in the maw of the social set. This picture deals with an heretofore untouched theme, shows this fellow, who is really a fine American type of workman, battling for his fellow-toilers and taken like a fish from his natural element and kept for a time in a whirl of society that is as mysterious to him as the future. Of course, his entry into the swell set with his inability to grasp conditions there, makes him the butt of much ridicule, but he is a real man and when the awakening comes he rises grandly to the occasion and shows the stuff of which he is made. His bout with the "Bruiser" is very realistic for Al Kaufman, who was engaged to play the part of the bruiser found Russell a tough nut to crack and it is a known fact that Russell put him down for the count in the picture. It is clean and suitable for the ladies and in addition, Mutt and Jeff and the Pathe News will be added.

pers which he conceals in a groove in the wall. Later Strannik and his men entrap the prince and Karin in the same room and by threatening to use the knout on the prince, force Karin to reveal the hiding place of the papers. Having secured the evidence he wants, Strannik leaves, to be followed a few moments later, by the princess. The heads of the league, headed by the prince, come upon them in an old cabin. The princess is killed, the papers recovered but in the darkness Strannik escapes.

Freed from his distasteful marriage and knowing that as soon as Strannik can report there will be a price on his head, the prince, Karin and the chancellor flee the country.

BILLIE HOUSE BACK AGAIN AT COLISEUM

After playing Prescott for four nights Billie House and his Merry Madfers will return to open again at the Coliseum tonight. The company will present a brand new and up-to-the-minute comedy full of laughs and funny situations. "A Night in the Casino" is the offering and will be presented for the first time in Phoenix. Special scenery has been painted for the production. Many new dances will be put on by the chorus and individual fancy dances will be put on by members of the company. The management also says that musical numbers will be the prettiest ever rendered at old Iron Sides. Everything is in readiness for a great production.

Amuzu

Mutt and Jeff are going to be shown today at the Amuzu every other hour and with them will be seen a one-reel feature, "Peg of the Ring," is to supply the thrills and the little heroine of the circus can be depended upon to do this with plenty to spare. In the last "Peg of the Ring" episode the girl and Dr. Lund were captured by the counterfeiters. We find them in the cellar of the den in danger of drowning but the doctor saves Peg and all of the counterfeiters are arrested by the detectives who have raided the den. Later at an entertainment given by Dr. Lund for the circus employees, Peg, under the spell of her strange intertance, accuses her sweetheart, Dr. Lund, Jr., of being one of the counterfeiters and the young physician is arrested.

Lamara

Here's one that's not to be found between the somber covers of any church book yet published. It's a rare recipe by Genevieve Hamper, photoplay star, who is seen in the William Fox production, "The Spider and the Fly," which is at the Lamara again today. Rather than have the recipe for her rarest appear in the usual cold type form, Miss Hamper characteristically describes the process of its making:

"You take butter the size of an egg, a small bran of garlic or if you prefer, a grated onion. Now cut up a small green pepper. Put the butter, garlic and pepper in a chafing dish and cook until a golden brown. As this takes some time, don't get impatient. Next add a can of tomato pulp and cook about twenty minutes. Now beat two eggs and add to the mixture with a half pound of Italian cheese. As the ingredients are simmering merrily, season to taste and add just a suspicion of sage."

Miss Hammer stakes her reputation as a screen star on the delectable qualities of this rarebit.

BLANCHE SWEET COMES TO ARIZONA

The Russian League of Freedom was a vast organization headed by a powerful young noble who determined to free the peasants from the terrible conditions the present system forces upon them. It was the first step toward a republic and the government used every effort to suppress it.

Prince Paul Alexis, the unknown power behind the league, is in love with the daughter of his chancellor, Karin Dolokhof and the three are working heart and soul for the league. The agents of the organization are everywhere in all walks of life and the chief of the secret police is beginning to feel a vague unrest throughout the domains of the czar, which appears to come from the section of the country in which Prince Alexis resides.

The prince and Karin have just plighted their troth and the old chancellor is delighted with the prospective marriage when the prince receives word from the czar that he must marry the Princess Tanya for political reasons. At first the prince wants to leave Russia with his betrothed and the chancellor, but Karin makes him realize that his duty to the league must come before his love for her. The Princess Tanya is in love with Count Egor Strannik, of the secret police, but throws him over and marries the prince.

Under cover of the princess' reception the heads of the league gather at the home of the prince for a conference. The chief of police learns of this through an intercepted secret message and sends Strannik to get evidence at the reception. The count resumes his affair with the princess and the prince catches her in Strannik's arms and beats him with a knout.

The heads of the league gather unnoticed in the library and the prince is entrusted with some important pa-
